Gallant Old Bucktail.

Michael Evers, of West Creek, who has been in very poor health for several months, was able to come to town last Monday to transact business. While making his calls he dropped in to square with ye editor, remarking at the same time that he did not owe a cent to any person; had plenty to eat and was contented. How we wish there were many more such men as Michael Evers. This honest Irish Republican, now in his 76th year enlisted in the Bucktails at Sterling Run in 1861 and delights to relate the many incidents connected with the "doings of the Bucktails." He is proud of the fact that another straight Republican vote will be cast from his home this fall—his youngest son being 21.

Voters of Cameron connty, remember Hon. Josiah Howard, the Republican nominee for Representative, stands for all that is for the up-building of Cameron county. His life is an open book and all citizens, regardless of party, will give him their cordial support at the polls. To whom do we appeal when our county, our borough, our schools, our churches, regardless of creed, needs assistance? Hon. Josiah Howard! Does he ever, has he ever, turned a deaf ear to the appeals of every laudable project. See that he has a larger vote than ever before accorded him. He is entitled to the solid vote of the county.

First Anniversary.

On Tuesday evening, at Emmanuel Parish House, the Union Friendly Society, celebrated it First Anniversary. The evening was pleasantly spent in dancing and card playing. As each person entered the building they were measured and paid three cents per foot and one cent for every additional inch, according to their height. A neat sum was realized for the treasury of the Society. The parish house was very tastefully decorated for the occasion, the society colors blue, green and white, predominating. Pennants of the most popular schools and colleges adorned the walls and the U. S. flag and autumn leaves were everywhere in profusion. This Society was organized last October, the first meeting being held at the home of the Misses Metzger, on Fifth street and ever since the beginning good times has rapidly succeeded each other. A luncheon was served during the evening by the young ladies of the society, one of the main features of the collation being individual birthday cakes, bearing one candle and souvenir card, in honor of the first anniversary. During the evening, Prof. W. Grier Briner read a short history of the first year of the Society and Prof. R. Howard Edgar favored the assemblage with a vocal solo, with Miss Ida Seger presiding at the piano. Miss Dorothy Nelson was the pianist during the dancing Guests of the Society present were Misses Edna Clark, Gladys Lloyd, Rena Jordan, Flora Schlecht, Julia Bair, Dora Nelson and Ida Seger, of Emporium, Miss Jean Calmes, of Fostoria, Ohio, and Miss Nellie Swain, of Olean, N. Y., and Messrs. Carl Swanson, Richard Kuehne, Jr., Eugene Metz, of Emporium, and Messrs. Warren Herbaugh, Olean, N. Y., W. C. Cope, Greensburg, Pa., W. G. Frome, Penn Argyle, Pa., E. J. Powwell, Scranton, Pa., and C. Fulton Hutchison, of Philadelphia. Members of the society present were the Misses Grace and Marguerite Metzger, Verena, Alma and Hilda Hertig, Elsie and Hilda Kuehne, Bessie McQuay, Marion Rentz, Helen Smutz, Minnie Baurgelt, Belle Husted, Margaret Dodson and Ethel Fisher and Messrs Russell McQuay, Howard Edgar, Grier Briner, Max Balcom, Allan Randolph, John Murray, Fred Keim, Everett Pierson, Scott Sterner and Arthur Catlin. All present report a very pleasant evening.

Daily papers from all sections of the country are free to all. This pleasant and comfortable Club Room is greatly appreciated by all patrons. A Good Position.

Can be had by ambitious young men and ladies in the field of "Wireless" or Railway telegraphy. Since the 8 hour law became effective, and since the Wireless companies are establishing stations throughout the country there is a great shortage of telegraphers. Positions pay beginners from $70 to $90 per month, with good chance of advancement. The National Telegraph Institute operates six official institutes in America, under supervision of R. R., and Wireless Officials and places all graduates into positions. It will pay you to write them for full details at Cincinnati, O, or Philadelphia, Pa.

DEATH'S DOINGS.

REPETTO.

John Bond Repetto, aged 30, who has been in the employ of C. B. Howard Company for eight or ten years, as blacksmith at their several lumber camps, died last Sunday night, about eleven o'clock. He had been out in the chestnut grove during the afternoon, gatheriug chestnuts and ate quite freely of them. He did not complain and when he retired appeared in his usual good health. His companions were aroused by a gurgling noise, about eleven o'clock, and were surprised to note his serious condition. All that could be done for him was done, but he died within a few minutes. No doubt his ailment was acute indigestion.

C. W. Rishell was called and his remains were brought to LaBar's undertaking rooms to be prepared for shipment, to his home at Kettle Creek. His brother, Orlin Repetto, a prosperous farmer and well-to-do citizen, came here to accompany the remains to his home, where the deceased had resided when not employed. C. H. Edwards, woods Supt., M. T. O'Leary, his woods boss and John T. Howard attended the funeral which was held at Trout Run. The services were conducted by Rev. Franklin A Lawson, pastor of M. E. Church. Cross Forks Lodge, I. O. O. F., of which the deceased was a member, attended the funeral in a body; deceased was also a member of Emporium Aerie No. 858, Fraternal Order of Eagles. The floral offerings are spoken of as being very beautiful and in great abundance.

Deceased will be remembered very pleasantly by his many Emporium acquaintances, he having stopped at City Hotel, where he kept an automobile for hire. His grand-father was an Italian, his father being a native of Missouri. Both of his parents are dead. He was an honorable and respected gentleman and had accumulated considerable money by strict economy. We understand he contemplated marrying in the near future, the lady of his choice being Miss Fish, of Nettleton, Cambria county, Pa., who fifteen years ago was employed in Miss Raymond's millinery store at Emporium.

Busy Court.

Court convened Monday at 1:30 p. m., Hon. Harry Alvan Hall, presiding, with Hon. G. J. LaBar and Hon. John A Wykoff, Associates.

The following attorneys are present: Messrs. F. D. Leet, M. Brennan, F. A. Johnson, J. P. Felt, Hon. J. C. Johnson, J.P. McNarney, D. J. Driscoll, St. Marys, Fred McFarlin, Ridgway, G. H. Baird, Ridgway, Hon. Geo. R. Dixon, of Ridgway, and H. W. Nelson, of Coudersport.

Court is being held this week and considerable business has been transacted. The most important cases that have been tried were: George Kenworthy vs Pennsylvania R. R., who sued for $20,000 damages on account of the death of his son, who was killed at Canoe Run, about a year ago. The trial lasted two days, resulting in a verdict of $1,500 in favor of the plaintiff. Motion was made for a new trial, which was granted. The burglars arrested for breaking into stores were all convicted.

Court will no doubt last all this week.

Attended State Firemen's Convention.

E. D. Fields and G. E. Swartz, two of Emporium's industrious young men, were PRESS visitors on Monday. Mr. Fields attended the State Firemen's Convention at Altoona last week, as delegate from Rescue Hook and Ladder Co., and reports a grand time. Ed. is loud in praise of the occasion and hopes the entire Emporium Department will become members of the State organization and attend the convention to be held at York, next year.

Let the department take up this matter early.

Live Advertisers.

One of Johsonburg's enterprisihg merchants has been for some time past running and advertisement that occupies two pages of the Press at that place. That merchant evidently believes that advertising pays, or else he would not be so foolish as to waste his money in printer's ink. He evidently has a different opinion on the advertising propositian than does a certain Smethport merchant, who told the writer the other day a display advertisement did not do him any good unless the printer would throw in a free local puff every time he changed his advertisement, which space would amount to almost as much as the space he was paying for, and for which he was receiving value received. Some merchants have some very queer ideas to what they conceive to be the printer's duty to those who buy advertising space in his columns. If a person went to a merchant and bought a coat and then turned around and asked the merchant to throw in the pants and vest to clinch the bargain we are of the opinion that merchant would very quickly, and properly, too, object to such an unreasonable request. The newspaper man's stock in trade is his advertising colums, and if he were foolish enough to give away his chief asset it would uot be very long before he received a call from the sheriff. Some of the most gigantic enterprises in this country have been built up through systematic and judicious advertising. Merchants, like Wanamaker, and others we might mention, spend fortunes every in newspaper advertising, and they reap immense dividends from their investments in printer's ink. Montgomery Ward & Co., Sears, Roebuck & Co., and all other mail order houses that come into competition with the home merchant, build up their immense business by advertising their wares, and the printer who will take their advertising can get his price without any quibbling on the part of the advertiser, without free local puffs thrown in. These astute merchants have found out that advertising does pay.—Smethport Democrat.

Election Approaching.

November 8th will soon be here and the electors of Cameron county will again be called upon to vote for the men best fitted to represent the people. John K. Tener, the Republican nominee for Governor and his partners on the ticket are meeting with rousing receptions wherever they go, it being Clearly manifest that the voters of this state will continue the policy of the Republican party. It is the duty of every Republican to stand shoulder to shoulder for the entire Republican ticket. Every one of the candidates on the Republican ticket are clean, upright gentlemen and our party is proud of them.

Remember that your duty is plain—stand by your color and not be caught by clap-trap stuff trumped up by "has beens" and self-nominated aspirants, repudiated by both of the old parties.

Statistics show that of all the houses built, over one-half are partially or totally destroyed by fire. HERE IS THE ISSUE

PARTY DIFFERENCES SQUARELY STATED.

Democrats Openly Working for Free Trade, Republicans Favor Protection—Ex-President Roosevelt Plainly States Case.

The New York Evening Post prints daily a symposium from representative Democrats on the sort of man the Democratic party needs for a leader and what his idea and ideals should be. These expressions of opinion are important as evidencing the trend of the Democratic mind and are worthy of more than passing notice. It is urged that the leader of the Democracy should be "a man who looks forward impatiently to a revenue tariff, not as a finality," but as a step only in the direction of absolute free trade."

From the above it is evident that those Republican who have a notion that the hankering for free trade does not still lurk in the Democratic mind need to revise their estimates. The necessity for united action on the part of Republicans is apparent. "This country," said former President Roosevelt at Sioux Falls, "is fully committed to the principle of protection." The Democrats, however, are not committed to the principle of protection, and they have not given up the fight, but are still propagating their free trade theories. In the Democratic symposium in the New York Evening Post it is argued that "the Democratic party must not take the field with any other less drastic end in view than the ultimate conversion of all our customs houses into warehouses, and making all our ports from Tampa bay to the Yukon as free to the commerce of the world as to our own shipping."

That sounds like a paraphrase of Democratic Leader Champ Clark's declaration that he is a free trader and glories in it; that if he had his way he would tear town every United States custom house from turret to foundation stone. The desire to get something cheap no matter what the effect is on wages, seems to be the dominating thought in the Democratic mind. It is not so with the Republican. He argues for a higher civilization, for the betterment of the condition of the farmer, the merchant, the manufacturer, the laboring man—of every citizen of the republic. His party stands where it always stood—against the lowering of the American standard of living. The pronouncement in the last Republican platform that the aim and purpose of the Republican policy is "not only to preserve, without excessive duties, that security against foreign competition to which American manufacturers, farmers and producers are entitled, but also to maintain the high standard of living of the wage earners of this country, who are the most direct beneficiaries of the protective system," is not Democratic doctrine, but it is Republican doctrine, and if the protective system is to be maintained it will be maintained by Republicans. Former President Roosevelt, in his Sioux Falls speech, stated the position of the Republican party in other words as follows:

"The American public wants the laboring man put on an equality with other citizens, so that he shall have the ability of living and the capacity to enjoy it; and to do this we must see that his wages are not lowered by improper competition with inferior wage workers abroad—with wage workers who are paid poorly and who live as no Americans are willing to live."

Tariff Commission Idea.

The Democrats have not a leg to stand upon in their clamor against the tariff and their iteration of the assertion that the high cost of living is due to the failure of the Republicans to meet the expectations of the people. Taking from them the specious ground for such a plea, and at the same time declaring for a further revision of the tariff for its perfecting, would be a masterful piece of political action. The tariff as it exists is a general scheme. President Taft would likely advocate taking up the schedules as fast as the data may be gathered by the tariff commission in order to recommend such changes as the figures and facts may warrant. This kind of progressive legislation upon a subject whose bearing upon the weal of the people is constantly changing will be regarded by the business interests as the most sane and advanced attitude yet assumed in regard to the principal topic of domestic legislation.

A Strong Presentation.

The administration's case is presented strongly. There have been achievements—actual achievements—in the direction of progress. Whether the country in this period of unrest and faultfinding will pause and rightly appraise these achievements remains to be seen. Probably not. But they are of record, cannot be blotted out, and will be properly appraised by a dispassionate people some time, if not now.—Washington Herald.

Farmers and Protection.

American farmers have prospered more through the protective policy than any other class. It is to the protective policy that they owe the big domestic market in which they are now selling their products at a profit instead of parting with them at a loss as they were compelled to do when they were obliged to ship their surplus to foreign countries.—San Francisco Chronicle.

WILL NOT FOOL THE FARMER

Democratic Advice Vainly Offered to Those Who Remember Years of '93 to '97.

"Production hasn't kept pace with the increase in population," "There's been a shortage in the crop," "Protection has no relation to prices which the farmer receives for his crops," are some of the explanations offered by our Democratic friends to the American farmer to induce him to abandon protection and embrace free trade. In this connection some figures issued by the government are exceedingly interesting.

The preliminary rough estimate of 90,000,000 for the whole country's population in 1910, compared with the 75,693,734 of the 1900 census shows the ratio of increase to be 19 per cent.

The average annual wheat yield from 1900 to 1909 inclusive was 660,000,000 bushels, whereas the annual average from 1890 to 1899 inclusive was 503,000,000. This was an increase of 30 per cent.

The average annual cotton yield from 1900 to 1909 inclusive was 11,600,000 bales; the average from 1890 to 1899 inclusive, 8,700,000—an increase of 33 per cent.

In view of the fact that production has kept up so good a relative pace to population, why the better prices which the American farmer and cotton planter have been getting for their wheat and cotton, as compared with the prices they received from 1890 to 1899? Why diminished exports and why the talk of scarcity? The New York Evening Post gives an answer to the question:

"In the very prosperous decade just behind us," says the Post, "the average individual consumed more grain and bought more clothing than in the not so prosperous decade of the later nineties."

"The very prosperous decade just behind us" was a protective period; the ten years before that felt the blight of the Democratic Wilson tariff law. Under protection "the average individual consumed more grain and bought more clothing" because he was employed; because Republican legislation had made possible profitable enterprise; because the wheels of industry were in motion and men had earnings to spend. Shut up the shops, buy abroad instead of at home, turn American workmen into the street; in short, go back to Democratic free trade and the demand for what the American farmer and cotton planter have to sell will be so curtailed as to bring upon them again the previous torment inflicted by the last years of Democratic rule in the United States. This would be to follow the advice of the latest Democratic campaign document, which cites the example of England's sixty years' free trade experience and tells us to "remove the obstruction (protection), allowing prices to sink to their natural level." No farmer who lived through the awful years of '93 to '97 will heed such advice as that.

The Truth Will Win.

It may be inappropriate for me to invite your attention, and that of all those engaged in advocating the Republican cause in the coming election, to the fact that it is of the utmost importance to make this a campaign of education as to facts and to clear away the clouds of misrepresentation that have obscured the real issues and have made it difficult to secure for the Republican majorities in congress the real credit due them from the country for the tremendous task they have accomplished. If this is brought clearly home to all voters, and especially to the young men now voting for the first time, and they become impressed, as they ought to be by this record, with the difference in the governmental efficiency and capacity of the Republican and Democratic parties, they will enroll themselves with the party of construction and progress rather than with the party of obstruction and negation, and the resulting legislation of the Sixty-second congress will vindicate their choice.—President William H. Taft.

Taft's Excellent Commission.

The great care taken by Mr. Taft in choosing the members of the stock and bond commission which is to investigate the question of placing the issue of railroad securities under the supervision of the interstate commerce commission is shown in the character of the men finally named. As experts they are all exceptionally qualified for the work assigned to them.

By wholly disregarding political considerations and all other ends except an impartial inquiry, Mr. Taft should succeed in disarming much of the hostility that has been evinced in interested quarters to an investigation of this nature. He has given assurance that the matter is to be treated by methods as nearly scientific as such a subject can be treated.—New York World.

Made Clear and Convincing.

The address of the president before the National Conservation congress at St. Paul is a state paper of consequence. It defines admirably the policy of conservation, illustrates the application to the several natural resources, describes present physical conditions and the operation of existing law and makes suggestions for improvements of both these latter. It has been said that Mr. Taft at Beverly was devoting much time and thought to the preparation of this address. The result is a document instructive on the subject, clear and convincing as to the president's attitude toward it.—Providence Journal.

PROMINENT PEOPLE

COWBOY MAYOR LOOKS HIGHER

James C. Dahlman, the cowboy mayor of Omaha, flushed by his success in securing the nomination for governor, has widened his field of ambition and it is said may become a candidate for United States senator.

Dahlman was born in 1856 in the village of Yorktown, a place that was then right in the range country. As a boy he received an education such as the town where he lived afforded, but when hardly out of short pants he straddled a horse and became a cowboy. All over the state, until 1890, he rode the range. In 1890 and when the settlers commenced to encroach upon the big stockmen of Texas, the drive to the north commenced. Dahlman was among those who moved, and during that year followed a big bunch of cattle across the country to Nebraska, driving to Dawes county, well beyond the outposts of civilization in the extreme northwest corner of the state. Here he rode the range for several years, serving a portion of the time as inspector of brands for the cattlemen of Nebraska and Wyoming.

With the building of the northwestern railroad toward the Black Hills there was a rush of settlers and the town of Chadron was established. It was a typical frontier city, a large portion of its inhabitants being gamblers, sure thing men and thugs, who terrorized the reputable inhabitants. One day when Dahlman was in town a committee of citizens called upon him and offered him the position of mayor. He laughed at the idea.

Dahlman rode back to camp, where he lay awake all night and thought. When morning broke he arose and ate breakfast as usual, but he did not go out with the boys. Instead, he bade them good-by, remarking that he had quit the range.

Saddling his cow pony, Dahlman rode into Chadron, where he called upon the city council and told them he was ready to accept the position of mayor. He was immediately elected and that day took charge of public affairs. He organized a police force and soon Chadron was as quiet and orderly a town as there was in the state.

Dahlman held the office of mayor of Chadron four years, during the time being elected sheriff of Dawes county, an office which he held six years. In 1898 he removed to Omaha and engaged in the live stock commission business. He is now serving his second term as mayor of Omaha.

M'CLUNG FOR THE TREASURY

No longer young himself, Franklin MacVeagh of the United States treasury is the patron of youth. He brought the north wind with him to the flat banks of the yellow Potomac, a Washington correspondent asserts.

So short coats, fancy vests and stick pins to match shirts and cravats—the visible symbols of a new class—have displaced boots and rusty plug hats in the somber offices of the nation's treasury.

Lee McClung, the new treasurer of the United States, is a bachelor of forty, but a boy when he is compared with his antediluvian forerunners.

McClung's blood, Confederate, though whiggish, points to his politics with a pretty certain guess. However, he makes no flourish of his views, and in his speech, now accented by the east, he declined to mention John Marshall, the chief justice, or Albert Sidney Johnston, killed at Shiloh, or John Morgan, the cavalry leader and raider—all of whom were of his family in the past—unless in answer to a question.

At Yale McClung—still square, muscular and heavy breasted, slim at the waist, and thewed in the legs like a racer—was captain of the football team and famous as a plunger and runner. Socially he was a leader. In all respects he was conspicuous and popular. He went into traffic as a profession—obtaining freight for a railroad—and then he became treasurer of his university, watching $10,500,000 of endowments and receiving $1,250,000 annually in rents, interest and tuition.

Some of the McClungs—Scotch Presbyterians, back in the Highlands, fierce men in love, in war, and as musicians—brought their temperamental eccentricities to America and handed them down to their generations. A notable heir, notorious heir, indeed, to such an inheritance, was Alexander Keith McClung, the Mississippi duelist, who should have maintained a graveyard of his own and employed an undertaker in his retinue.

THINK CHANLER WAS DUPED

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Winthrop Chanler have recently been the topic for gossip in two continents, it being alleged that Mrs. Chanler tricked her husband into turning over to her his property, leaving him penniless. They were married in Paris June 18 last. Mr. Chanler, whose portrait is here shown, is connected with the Astors of New York and is well known in society in that city. He inherited a large fortune and became an artist early in life. His first wife, who was Miss Julia R. Chamberlain, obtained a divorce from him in France in 1908. Mr. Chanler formerly was sheriff of Dutchess county, New York. He is a brother of Stuyvesant Chanler, ex-lieutenant governor of the Empire state. Mrs. Chanler, better known as Lina Cavalieri, is celebrated for her great beauty as well as for her fine voice. She is the daughter of an Italian workingman, and in early life sold flowers on the street. Then she became a cafe singer, and through the aid of a Russian count studied for the operatic stage. Mme. Cavalieri's debut in Madrid was a failure, but she persevered, and finally won great success in Europe as well as in the United States.

Although neither Cavalieri nor the lawyers who drew the contract have divulged its terms, it is said that it contained a provision that Cavalieri was to receive $20,000 yearly, and a stipulation was made that this sum was to be paid whether they lived together or were separated or divorced.

Chanler was anxious to give the singer all he possessed. There is a clause in the contract, which was principally drawn by Cavalieri's French notary, that is believed to have compromised the trust fund of $250,000 belonging to Chanler's two young daughters as well as the alimony allowed by the courts to the first wife.

BRITISH NURSE IN AMERICA

The experience of a competent nurse in the first steps of her humane though arduous mission is a little history of itself. This is exemplified in the career of Miss Elizabeth Murray, who recently came to the United States to study up the methods of our great hospitals. Her tour of inspection is later to take in the Philippine islands and China, and she will return to England to go on duty at the military hospital in Devonshire.

The life of an active English army nurse is one of great self-sacrifice and toil. There have been instances in the career of such where short rations meant an onion a day for food. Miss Murray was brought up to an ideal country life, excelling in athletics, and first attending the Stevens hospital in Dublin. After her graduation she took a six months' course in fever cases in London, and later still received her diploma from Bolinda hospital, Dublin.

When she finally entered the British army reserve corps she was welcomed into the organization by Princess Christian, a daughter of Queen Victoria. That association has very rigid rules. The applicant for admission must be of good family, perfect health and careful professional training. A high grade of intelligence also is required. There is a certain social life, too, for the army nurse, for she must necessarily associate with the wives of officers at military posts.

As "Sister Murray" this noble woman, who has devoted her life to the welfare of others, is a true type of the modern nurse whose skilled ministrations are a vital element in army life.

WHERE HISTORY-MAKING BATTLE WAS FOUGHT

HISTORIC associations cling about many places along the lower part of the Walloomsac valley in the region of Walloomsac and North Hoosick (the St. Croix of Revolutionary days), and despite the lapse of time many evidences still remain to recall the battle fought there 133 years ago—a battle which has been described as fought by New Hampshire militia upon New York soil and named for Vermont—the battle of Bennington.

True, the site of the old St. Croix bridge, destroyed by the retreating militiamen to check the advance of Col. Frederick Baum and his detachment of British, Hessians and Indian allies, is now occupied by a modern iron structure, but just below it still stand the substantial foundation walls of the old mill, which housed part of the flour and stores the invaders came to seize, together with the old wooden flume and the wreckage of the mill dam; while on the highway just above them is the old story-and-a-half frame house occupied temporarily as headquarters by the enemy's officers. It is nearly opposite the confluence of White Creek and the Walloomsac river, while a little farther up the valley, near the point now designated as "Battlefield Park," is the hill upon which the invaders set the cannon which were subsequently captured by Gen. John Stark and his men. Scattered about elsewhere are the remains of redoubts and many other places which history or legend associates with the brief but decisive contest of August 16, 1777, which gave the first check to the invasion that ended in the battle of Saratoga.

A BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN THE REVOLUTION

ROUND DISCOVERY MOUNTAIN NEAR ELIZABETHTOWN

The well-preserved old Revolutionary house and the lands about it, located about a half-mile from the village of North Hoosick, on the road to Cambridge, are within the conveyance of 12,000 acres known as the Walloomsac Patent, dated June 15, 1739, in the thirteenth year of George II.'s reign. In this patent "all trees of the diameter of 24 inches and upwards at 12 inches from the ground were excepted" for masts for our Royal Navy, and also all such other trees as "may be fit to make planks, knees and other things necessary for the use of our said navy only." The yearly rent of two shillings and sixpence for each hundred acres of the granted lands was to be paid at the custom house in the city of New York on Lady Day, the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

While the residence has been somewhat modernized by the building of a veranda and other minor changes, the structure retains many reminders of the perilous times. The hand-hewn timbers are visible, and there is preserved the strong door which opened into the south end of the house, against the casing of which a British officer stood when a Yankee from the hill on the south bank of White Creek picked him off with his gun. The door is in a good start of preservation, and on it is the massive old lock which in early days would have proven an obstruction to a person seeking to unlawfully enter the building, but to the modern house breaker it would be as a toy. The lock is ten inches long by five and a half inches wide and one and a half inches thick. The original brass key, six inches in length, is still in position to shoot the bolt.

In the days "which tried men's souls" the building was used as a postoffice, and an inn, before it became the headquarters for the British officers under Colonel Baum. In those days each inn and tavern keeper was required to enter into recognizance to the people of the state of New York in the sum of £50, not to keep a disorderly house or suffer any cock-fighting, gaming or playing with cards or dice, or keep any billiard table or other gaming table or shuffleboard within it. In regard to the selling of strong liquors, exceptions were made for the sale of metheglin, currant wine, cherry wine and cider made by the inn-keepers. At each tavern at least two spare beds, with good and sufficient sheeting and covering, were to be kept for guests, in accordance with the demands of the law. "Good and sufficient" stabling and provender had to be provided for four horses or cattle, and hay and pasturage in summer. No liquors were allowed to be sold to apprentices, servants and slaves. No innkeeper could collect a debt larger than ten shillings for liquors sold to travelers.

In October, 1896, the old St. Croix (San Coik) grist mill, then owned by John G. Burke, was burned. On one of the timbers of the structure was to be seen the inscription: "A. D. 1776," the suposed date of the erection of the building. It was in this mill, on the head of a barrel of flour, where this letter was written to General Burgoyne:

"Sancoik, 14th August, 1777, 9 o'clock. Sir: I have the honor to inform your excellency that I arrived here at 8 o'clock in the morning, having had intelligence of a party of the enemy being in possession of a mill, which they abandoned at our approach, but, in their usual way, fired from the bushes and took their road to Bennington. A savage was slightly wounded; they broke down the bridge, which has retarded our march over an hour; they left in the mill about 78 barrels of very fine flour, 1,000 bushels of wheat, 20 barrels of salt, and about £1,000 worth of pearl-ash and potash. I have ordered 30 provincials and an officer to guard the provisions and the pass of the bridge. By five prisoners taken here, they agree that from 1,500 to 1,800 are at Bennington, but are supposed to leave it on our approach. I will proceed so far today as to fall on the enemy early tomorrow, and make such dispositions as I may think necessary from the intelligence I may receive. People are flocking in hourly, but want to be armed. The savages cannot be controlled, and they ruin and take everything they please. I am your excellency's most humble servant,

"F. BAUM.

"P. S.—Beg Your Excellency to pardon the hurry of this letter, as it is written upon the head of a barrel."

The new steel bridge, known as the Dublin bridge, which spans White Creek near the old dam, was erected in October, 1903, to replace an old, covered, wooden structure.

What a Queer Mummy Lid

A GOOD deal has been written lately about the malignant mummy at the British museum—or, rather, the lid of the coffin that contained the mummy; for, of course, there is no mummy in this particular case. It is merely a lid that is reported to have brought so many personal disasters in its train.

A well-known physician, who is interested in Egyptology, was asked his opinion concerning the strange case of the mummy of the priestess that has aroused so much curious interest.

"I think," he said, "that the mummy having been torn to pieces, the spirit of the priestess strives to remain in contact with the only material thing that is left in touch with her, namely, the lid of the coffin. This is the opinion of most occultists. The spirit of the priestess has attached itself to the case, which is a sort of physical basis."

"But why so malignant," this authority was asked, "as to bring about, according to reports, all sorts of disasters and accidents to persons at the present day?"

"If," he explained, "it is true that the mummy was torn to pieces it was a fearful desecration, and quite enough to make the priestess furious. Some persons who try to get into communication with her by occult means say, also, she was very badly treated and put to death cruelly. Of this, however, I have no proof.

"It has been said that the curse of Egypt never leaves a man after he has taken part in the violation of the chambers of the dead. It follows him to the sacred spaces and comes forth upon him in the occult world.

"I recall the case of a real mummy which was brought to England, in which a papyrus was found, the substance of which was that the person who desecrated the mummy would be torn to pieces by a ferocious animal in a foreign land and would be deprived of burial. Some time afterward one of the persons connected with it went to Africa to shoot elephants. He wounded a gigantic animal, that charged at him and literally tore him to pieces with its trunk and feet. The attendants fled in terror, and when they returned, only fragments of his body remained."

"And what would yo do," he was asked, "with the coffin lid at the British museum that is supposed to have caused so much mischief?"

"I would leave it," he replied, "where it is. Beyond a recent case of a young lady who made great fun of it, and thereafter met with a serious accident, the disasters that were reported to be so numerous on its first arrival at the museum have apparently ceased. If it is true that the spirit is earth-bound, and is attached to the case, it would only cause further trouble if the lid were now destroyed. It would be different, of course, if the mummy could be restored; but, as it is, I don't think anything can be done.

"I rather wonder, however, that the authorities at the museum have not removed it, for they do not like a number of persons who are inquiring into the occult going and staring at it. There was a very fine and rather curious scarabaeus which they removed on the ground that they were not certain that it was genuine. It was in a glass case, and whenever I placed my fingers upon it I perceived a heating and tingling of the hands. Others found the same curious effect. I tried it several times with the same result, but I did not find the same effect with the other scarabael. Why it was I do not know."

The Kitchen Cabinet

TO INSURE good digestion, exercise daily in the open air, eat an abundance of fruit and drink pure water freely between meals.

Plain, simple foods, as direct as possible from fields, orchards and woods, should always be our aim.

Planning for a Small Family.

When catering for a small family, care, judgment and economy must be used or one kind of food must be served several times in order to avoid waste.

When purchasing utensils and dishes for cooking, choose the size most suitable to the size of the family, as such an investment has a great advantage even in serving leftovers.

In buying a roast, too small a one dries out in cooking and is not an economical purchase. The beef left over may be served in slices heated in a Mexican sauce curry, tomato, or horseradish sauce. The little bits too small to serve may be chopped and seasoned, then used as sandwich filling, or one can always have hash.

Bits of leftover vegetable like carrot, beans or corn, may be added to a salad greatly to its advantage.

Eggs contain no waste and add to the nutriment of a dish. When making an omelet if a few peas are at hand fold them in at the last or serve in a sauce poured around an omelet.

Very tempting desserts may be made from stale cake cut in rounds or fancy shapes, a preserved pear or peach, with a little of the syrup and whipped cream served on each piece.

For a small family one can make so many attractive little dishes that would be entirely out of the question with a larger family.

When using gas a small portable oven to be used over a burner is a great saving.

A delicious dessert which is both pleasing to the eye and the palate is prepared by beating together a half cup of any favorite jelly and the white of one egg. It will take a little time to beat until it stands alone, but the result will repay the effort. Serve in sherbet cups with sweetened whipped cream on top. A change from the usual French toast may be made by cutting the bread in rounds or in some fancy shape, dip in egg and milk and fry in butter as usual. Often a dish refused many times will be welcomed if the appearance is changed. It is necessary in all successful cooking to appeal first to the eye.

RESOLVED to live with all my might while I do live. Resolved, never to lose one moment of time, but improve it in the most profitable way I possibly can. Resolved, never to do any thing which I should despise or think meanly of in another. Resolved, never to do any thing out of revenge. Resolved, never to do any thing which I should be afraid to do if it were the last hour of my life.

—Jonathan Edwards.

Leaks That Sink the Household Ship.

Meat is the most costly and extravagant of all articles of food. Consequently every bit should be saved and worked over.

The cheaper cuts of meat make the best soups and stews. Where a sauce is used to hide the appearance there is no occasion to spend money on choice cuts.

Soup meat, tasteless as it is, may be nicely seasoned and made into pressed meat, hash or other dishes quite as good.

Meat left from beef tea should be saved for highly seasoned dishes. The water has drawn out the flavoring and the stimulating principles of the beef, but the fiber, which contains the greater part of the nourishment, is left undissolved.

After using all the ham that will slice nicely from the bone, chip the remainder for frizzled ham and put the bone in the soup pot.

An ordinary meat grinder will save money and hours of time, as it chops all kinds of food easily.

Fat from meats and soup stock should be carefully saved and clarified, and if carefully done no fat need be bought for general frying.

Tea leaves should be pressed tightly after they have been used and put away to use in sweeping the carpet. They both brighten the carpet and keep the dust from flying over the walls and furniture.

A little water in the wooden tubs will prevent them from falling to pieces.

Twine taken from bundles, if tied together and wound in a ball will always be ready when a string is wanted.

Fold pieces of manilla paper and put in the wall pocket on the pantry door. Use them for sifting flour and save time and dishes. A piece of paper makes a good moulding board when thickly dusted with flour.

Old tablecloths make fine tray cloths or strips for the table to save the cloth. They are nice for bread and cake cloths, to cover them after baking.

Put the scrubbing brush, vegetable brush and hairbrush bristle side down to dry, otherwise the water soaks into the brush and soon destroys it.

We Have Over Half of the New World

WASHINGTON—The indications being that the census will show the population of the United States to be over 90,000,000, it seems assured that the republic contains more than half of the inhabitants of the New World. It is quite probable that all of the remaining countries of this hemisphere have fewer than 80,000,000 inhabitants.

That point can never be settled definitely until conditions change radically in many extensive regions of Latin America. Now most of the states south of Mexico and north of the Argentine either make a farce of their census taking or else do not attempt it at any time.

Recent estimates, partly based upon census records, which have been made in South America and Central America, indicate that there are about 70,000,000 people living between the Rio Grande and Cape Horn, including the West Indies. Canada has perhaps 7,000,000, allowing for rapid growth since the census of 1901, and Newfoundland adds less than 250,000.

Unless the estimates, which seem most intelligently made, are very wide of the mark in several countries where there are no authentic and exact statistics of population, the total for the New World, outside of the United States, cannot exceed 80,000,000.

Brazil, much the largest country of South America, is the most populous in the Western Hemisphere, except the United States. It is probable that a full and careful enumeration of the Brazilians would show about 20,000,000 of them.

Mexico, only about 25 per cent of the size of Brazil in square miles, is safely established in third place among all the nations of the New World, as far as numbers go. In other respects the Argentine surpasses Mexico, and so does Canada. Their industrial output is greater and their foreign commerce is larger in every way.

Argentina and Canada are alke also, in growing so fast and with such assurance of continued swift expansion that they may overtake and pass Mexico. Their chief cities already surpass the largest civic centers in the country which Diaz makes his footstool. But now neither is within 6,000,000 of the Mexican total.

As a rule, with comparatively few exceptions, Latin America is rich in unsettled country. A very large part of the vast expanse of land south of the Mexican frontier, all the way to the southern end of South America lies open to settlement.

Some day such wealth in unused natural resources must cause great growth, but that is a matter of the indefinite future. For the present it is certain that the United States will hold its lead over the other countries of the New World, counting all of them together.

Gives No Money for Road Building

AS regularly as the sessions roll around, congress sidesteps, smothers or overrides all propositions which would embark the government in the business of road building. The logic and importance in the outcry for "goodroads" is universally admitted; but everybody's business comes perilously near having nobody's attention.

Some commnuities, townships, counties and a few states have made more or less real progress towards improving the highways locally. Where the states take a hand a beginning is made towards obtaining "through routes." But, despite all that has been said for a revival of road building, notwithstanding editorial support from publications of all partisan shades, the movement as yet has no central organization which presses the work along broad lines.

The federal government thus far cooperates only by giving advice. It maintains a small bureau in the department of agriculture devoted first to the propaganda of the good roads idea and secondly to the maintenance of a limited corps of experts, who, when their assistance is solicited, will make suggestions as to the best methods for road building under given circumstances, and to a certain extent, experiments in the use of materials are conducted by the specialists of this bureau. Here the government stops, for the reason that dominant view in congress has been that this properly delimits the government's function.

Representative Anthony of Kansas introduced a bill in the house last winter for the construction of a military highway between Fort Leavenworth and Fort Riley, 100 miles, by convicts in the two federal penitentiaries at Fort Leavenworth. The bill was lost after a debate that developed into a general discussion of the good roads movement.

The measure had the indorsement of President Taft, the chief of staff of the army and the quartermaster general. General J. Franklin Bell, then chief of staff, stated in a letter to Representative Anthony that the proposed road would unquestionably be of great military value and convenience." Farmers of many townships through which the proposed road would run offered to supply all the rock and other material to be used in its construction.

Like others of its kind, this measure was wrecked upon constitutional rocks. The opponents of the bill contended that General Bell did not claim the road to be a military necessity, and that, if not done for this purpose, the government could not build it, because the constitution authorizes the construction of only such roads as are required to meet military necessities and post roads.

Capital Boys Are to Be Suppressed

REGULATIONS to protect children from danger of injury and to have them looked after for violations of the regulations are to be enforced by the Washington police.

"The danger to children who make playgrounds of the streets," says Maj. Sylvester, "has been long since established. Now that there are public playgrounds in different sections of the city the children should use them rather than risk their lives."

Complaints against children playing on the streets sometimes cause a peck of trouble to the police.

Children jump upon moving streetcars. Others stand upon the streets. Others are loud and boisterous.

"Death and accident have been caused by street cars and other vehicles," the superintendent of police says. "On the other hand, children playing on the streets have caused destruction to property.

"Ball playing on the streets," he continued, "has resulted in complaints on account of noises and broken windows. The same hue and cry is raised when vacant lots are used for baseball and other games. At times, in certain localities, large and noisy gatherings are attracted."

Street corner gatherings are to be broken up, the superintendent says. Indulgence in profanity and other bad language is to mean punishment. All offenders who are caught will be prosecuted. The police think that keeping boys off the streets at night would accomplish much good.

Government Has No Hall of Records

AS the country has been told about once a day for the last 20 years, the United States Government has no hall of records, no place where it can keep the valuable documents which from time to time it is necessary to clear out of the departments and put some place for safe keeping. This being the case when a fire broke out the other day under the offices of the geological survey there was wild excitement. In the basement of the store that got on fire are the records and archives of the geological survey. These are invaluable and if destroyed could never be replaced, but the United States Government is obliged to house its different departments in rented buildings all over Washington, and the constant danger threatens the destruction of valuable archives whenever a fire breaks out, and there is not any reason why a fire should not break out in a non-fireproof building.

The loss of government property in this fire is thought to be less than $7,000, but in the library over the fir was a unique collection of geologic literature containing more than 65,000 volumes, 85,000 pamphlets and 36,000 maps, the most complete collection of geological works and maps in this country if not in the world.

What the United States Government needs is a magnificent hall of records, where all the valuable archives of the government might be stored in absolutely fireproof vaults. Some day after a few hundred million dollars' worth of these valuable records have been destroyed congress will give us a hall of records.

It's Your Kidneys.

Dont Mistake the Cause of Your Troubles. An Emporium Citizen Shows How to Cure Them.

Many people never suspect their kidneys. If suffering from a lame, weak or weak or aching back they think that it is only muscular weakness; when urinary trouble sets in they think it will soon correct itself. And so it is with all the other symptoms of kidney disorders. That is just where the danger lies. You must cure these troubles or they may lead to diabetes or Bright's disease. The best remedy to use is Doan's Kidney Pills. It cures all ills which are caused by weak or diseased kidneys. Emporium. people testify to permanent cures.

G. F. Balcom, Sixth, Emporium, Pa., says. "For about three years I have used Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Taggart's Drug Store and have fouund them to be a reliable remedy. I would not recommend this preparation if I did not have the strongest faith in its curative powers.

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents, Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Prices 25c; 35c; 50 and 75c.

It Beats All.

This is quoted from a letter of M. Stockwell, Hannibal, Mo. "I recently used Foley's Honey and Tar for the first time. To say I am pleased does not half express my feelings. It beats all the remedies I ever used. I contracted a bad cold and was threatened with pneumonia. The first doses gave great relief and one bottle completely cured me." Contains no opiates. For sale by Emporium Drug Co.

Capt. Bogardus Again Hits the Bull's Eye.

This world famous rifle shot who holds the championship record of 100 pigeons in 100 consecutive shots is living at Linoln, Ill. Recently interviewed, he says:—"I suffered a long time with kidney and bladder trouble and used several well known kidney medicines, all of which gave me no relief until I started taking Foley's Kidney Pills. Before I used Foley Kidney Pills I had severe backaches and pains in my kidneys with suppression and a cloudy voiding. On arising in the morning I would get dull headaches. Now I have taken three bottles of Foley Kidney Pills and feel 100 per cent. better. I am never bothered with my kidneys or bladder and again feel like my own self." For sale by Emporium Drug Co.

The pleasant purgative effect experienced by all who use Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, and the healthy condition of the body and mind which they create, makes one feel joyful. Sold by all dealer.

News Snapshots Of the Week The uprising in Portugal was the most important news event of the week. King Manuel was variously reported a captive and a fleeing monarch. The consecration of St. Patrick's cathedral in New York was one of the greatest events in American Catholic history. The swamping of a boat of the battleship New Hampshire in the Hudson river cost the lives of more than a score of sailors. The Democrats of Wyoming have nominated John M. Carey, an insurgent Republican, for governor. Governor Hughes of New York resigned, and Horace K. White became executive of the Empire State. THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Amidst numerous difficulties the servants deserted. As Miss Innes locked up for the night she was startled by a dark figure on the veranda. Unseemly noises disturbed her during the night. In the morning Miss Innes found a strange link cuff-button in a hamper. Gertrude and Halsey arrived with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot and Arnold Armstrong was found shot to death in the hall. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. The link cuff-button mysteriously disappeared. Detective Jamieson arrived. Gertrude revealed she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she talked in the billiard room a few moments before the murder. Jamieson accused Miss Innes of holding back evidence. He imprisoned an intruder in an empty room. The prisoner escaped down a laundry chute. Gertrude was suspected. A negro found the other half of what proved to be Jack Bailey's cuff-button. Halsey reappears and says he and Bailey left in response to a telegram. Gertrude said she had given Bailey an unloaded revolver, fearing to give him a loaded weapon. Cashier Bailey of Paul Armstrong's bank, defunct, was arrested for embezzlement. Halsey said Armstrong wrecked his own bank and could clear Bailey. Paul Armstrong's death was announced. Halsey's fiancee, Louise Armstrong, was found at the lodge. The lodgekeeper said Louise and Arnold had a long talk the night of the murder. Louise was prostrated. Louise told Halsey, that while she still loved him she was to marry another, and that he would despise her when he learned the whole story. It developed that Dr. Walker and Louise were to be married. A prowler was heard in the house. Louise was found at the bottom of the circular staircase. Louise said she had heard a knock at the door and answered it. Something brushed past her on the stairway and she fainted.

"You heard no other sound?" the coroner asked. "There was no one with Mr. Armstrong when he entered?"

"It was perfectly dark. There were no voices and I heard nothing. There was just the opening of the door, the shot, and the sound of somebody falling."

"Then, while you went through the drawing room and upstairs to alarm the household, the criminal, whoever it was, could have escaped by the east door?"

"Yes."

"Thank you. That will do."

I flatter myself that the coroner got little enough out of me. I saw Mr. Jamieson smiling to himself, and the coroner gave me up, after a time. I admitted I had found the body, said I had not known who it was until Mr. Jarvis told me, and ended by looking up at Barbara Fitzhugh and saying that in renting the house I had not expected to be involved in any family scandal. At which she turned purple.

The verdict was that Arnold Armstrong had met his death at the hands of a parson or persons unknown, and we prepared to leave. Barbara Fitzhugh flounced out without waiting to speak to me, but Mr. Harton came up, as I knew he would.

"You have decided to give up the house, I hope, Miss Innes," he said. "Mrs. Armstrong has wired me again."

"I am not going to give it up," I maintained, "until I understand some things that are puzzling me. The day that the murderer is discovered, I will leave."

"Then, judging by what I have heard, you will be back in the city very soon," he said. And I knew that he suspected the discredited cashier of the Traders' bank.

Mr. Jamieson came up to me as I was about to leave the coroner's office.

"How is your patient?" he asked with his odd little smile.

"I have no patient," I replied, startled.

"I will put it in a different way, then. How is Miss Armstrong?"

"She—she is doing very well," I stammered.

"Good," cheerfully. "And our ghost? Is it laid?"

"Mr. Jamieson," I said suddenly, "I wish you would come to Sunnyside and spend a few days there. The ghost is not laid. I want you to spend one night at least watching the circular staircase. The murder of Arnold Armstrong was a beginning, not an end."

He looked serious.

"Perhaps I can do it," he said. "I have been doing something else, but—well, I will come out to-night."

We were very silent during the trip back to Sunnyside. I watched Gertrude closely and somewhat sadly. To me there was one glaring flaw in her story, and it seemed to stand out for every one to see. Arnold Armstrong had had no key, and yet she said she had locked the east door. He must have been admitted from within the house; over and over I repeated it to myself.

That night, as gently as I could, I told Louise the story of her stepbrother's death. She sat in her big, pillow-filled chair, and heard me through without interruption. It was clear that she was shocked beyond words; if I had hoped to learn anything from her expression, I had failed. She was as much in the dark as we were.

CHAPTER XVIII.

A Hole in the Wall.

My taking the detective out to Sunnyside raised an unexpected storm of protest from Gertrude and Halsey. I was not prepared for it, and I scarcely knew how to account for it. To me Mr. Jamieson was far less formidable under my eyes, where I knew what he was doing, than he was off in the city, twisting circumstances and motives to suit himself and learning what he wished to know about events at Sunnyside in some occult way. I was glad enough to have him there, when excitements began to come thick and fast.

A new element was about to enter into affairs; Monday, or Tuesday at the latest, would find Dr. Walker back in his green and white house in the village, and Louise's attitude to him in the immediate future would signify Halsey's happiness or wretchedness, as it might turn out. Then, too, the return of her mother would mean, of course, that she would have to leave us, and I had become greatly attached to her.

From the day Mr. Jamieson came to Sunnyside, there was a subtle change in Gertrude's manner to me. It was elusive, difficult to analyze, but it was there. She was no longer frank with me, although I think her affection never wavered. At the time I laid the change to the fact that I had forbidden all communication with John Bailey, and had refused to acknowledge any engagement between the two. Gertrude spent much of her time wandering through the grounds, or taking long cross-country walks. Halsey played golf at the Country club day after day, and after Louise left, as she did the following week, Mr. Jamieson and I were much together. He played a fair game of cribbage, but he cheated at solitaire.

The night the detective arrived, Saturday, I had a talk with him. I told him of the experiences Louise Armstrong had had the night before on the circular staircase, and about the man who had so frightened Rosie on the drive. I saw that he thought the information was important, and to my suggestion that we put an additional lock on the east wing door he opposed a strong negative.

"I think it probable," he said, "that our visitor will be back again, and the thing to do is to leave things exactly as they are, to avoid rousing suspicion. Then I can watch for at least a part of each night and probably Mr. Innes will help us out. I would say as little to Thomas as possible. The old man knows more than he is willing to admit."

I suggested that Alex, the gardener, would probably be willing to help, and Mr. Jamieson undertook to make the arrangement. For one night, however, Mr. Jamieson preferred to watch alone. Apparently nothing occurred. The detective sat in absolute darkness on the lower step of the stairs, dozing, he said afterwards, now and then. Nothing could pass him in either direction, and the door in the morning remained as securely fastened as it had been the night before. And yet one of the most inexplicable occurrences of the whole affair took place that very night.

Liddy came to my room on Sunday morning with a face as long as the moral law. She laid out my things as usual, but I missed her customary garrulousness. I was not regaled with the new cook's extravagance as to eggs, and she even forbore to mention "that Jamieson," on whose arrival she had looked with silent disfavor.

"What's the matter, Liddy?" I asked at last. "Didn't you sleep last night?"

"No, ma'am," she said stiffly.

"Did you have two cups of coffee at your dinner?" I inquired.

"No, ma'm," indignantly.

I sat up and almost upset my hot water—I always take a cup of hot water with a pinch of salt, before I get up. It tones the stomach.

"Liddy Allen," I said, "stop combing that switch and tell me what is wrong with you."

Liddy heaved a sigh.

"Girl and woman," she said, "I've been with you 25 years, Miss Rachel, through good temper and bad—" the idea! and what I have taken from her in the way of sulks!—"but I guess I can't stand it any longer. My trunk's packed."

"Who packed it?" I asked, expecting from her tone to be told she had wakened to find it done by some ghostly hand.

"I did; Miss Rachel, you won't believe me when I tell you this house is haunted. Who was it fell down the clothes chute? Who was it scared Miss Louise almost into her grave?"

"I'm doing my best to find out," I said. "What in the world are you driving at?" She drew a long breath.

"There is a hole in the trunkroom wall, dug out since last night. It's big enough to put your head in, and the plaster's all over the place."

"Nonsense!" I said. "Plaster is always falling."

But Liddy clenched that.

"Just ask Alex," she said. "When he put the new cook's trunk there last night the wall was as smooth as this. This morning it's dug out, and there's plaster on the cook's trunk. Miss Rachel, you can get a dozen detectives and put one on every stair in the house, and you'll never catch anything. There's some things you can't handcuff."

Liddy was right. As soon as I could, I went up to the trunkroom, which was directly over my bedroom. The plan of the upper story of the house was like that of the second floor, in the main. One end, however, over the east wing, had been left only roughly finished, the intention having been to convert it into a ballroom at some future time. The maids' rooms, trunkroom, and various storerooms, including a large airy linen room, opened from a long corridor, like that on the second floor. And in the trunkroom, as Liddy had said, was a fresh break in the plaster.

Not only in the plaster, but through the lathing, the aperture extended. I reached into the opening, and three feet away, perhaps, I could touch the bricks of the partition wall. For some reason the architect in building the house had left a space there that struck me, even in the surprise of the discovery, as an excellent place for a conflagration to gain headway.

"You are sure the hole was not here yesterday?" I asked Liddy, whose expression was a mixture of satisfaction and alarm. In answer she pointed to the new cook's trunk—that necessary adjunct of the migratory domestic. The top was covered with fine white plaster, as was the floor. But there were no large pieces of mortar lying around—no bits of lathing. When I mentioned this to Liddy she merely raised her eyebrows. Being quite confident that the gap was of unholy origin, she did not concern herself with such trifles as a bit of mortar and lath. No doubt they were even then heaped neatly on a gravestone in the Casanova churchyard!

I brought Mr. Jamieson up to see the hole in the wall, directly after breakfast. His expression was very odd when he looked at it, and the first thing he did was to try to discover what object, if any, such a hole could have. He got a piece of candle, and by enlarging the aperture a little was able to examine what lay beyond. The result was nil. The trunkroom, although heated by steam heat, like the rest of the house, boasted of a fireplace and mantel as well. The opening had been made between the flue and the outer wall of the house. There was revealed, however, on inspection, only the brick of the chimney on one side and the outer wall of the house on the other; in depth the space extended only to the flooring. The breach had been made about four feet from the floor, and inside were all the missing bits of plaster. It had been a methodical ghost.

It was very much of a disappointment. I had expected a secret room, at the very least, and I think even Mr. Jamieson had fancied he might at last have a clew to the mystery. There was evidently nothing more to be discovered; Liddy reported that everything was serene among the servants, and that none of them had been disturbed by the noise. The maddening thing, however, was that the nightly visitor had evidently more than one way of gaining access to the house, and we made arrangements to redouble our vigilance as to windows and doors that night.

Halsey was inclined to pooh-pooh the whole affair. He said a break in the plaster might have occurred months ago and gone unnoticed, and that the dust had probably been stirred up the day before. After all, we had to let it got at that, but we put in an uncomfortable Sunday. Gertrude went to church, and Halsey took a long walk in the morning. Louise was able to sit up, and she allowed Halsey and Liddy to assist her downstairs late in the afternoon. The east veranda was shady, green with vines and palms, cheerful with cushions and lounging chairs. We put Louise in a steamer chair, and she sat there passively enough, her hands clasped in her lap.

We were very silent. Halsey sat on the rail with a pipe, openly watching Louise, as she looked broodingly across the valley to the hills. There was something baffling in the girl's eyes; and gradually Halsey's boyish features lost their glow at seeing her about again, and settled into grim lines. He was like his father just then.

We sat until late afternoon, Halsey growing more and more moody. Shortly before six he got up and went into the house, and in a few minutes he came out and called me to the telephone. It was Anna Whitcomb, in town, and she kept me for 20 minutes, telling me the children had had the measles and how Mme. Sweeny had botched her new gown.

When I finished, Liddy was behind me, her mouth a thin line.

"I wish you would try to look cheerful, Liddy," I groaned, "your face would sour milk." But Liddy seldom replied to my gibes. She folded her lips a little tighter.

"He called her up," she said oracularly, "he called her up, and asked her to keep you at the telephone, so he could talk to Miss Louise. A thankless child is sharper than a serpent's tooth."

"Nonsense!" I said brusquely. "I might have known enough to leave them. It's a long time since you and I were in love, Liddy, and—we forget."

Liddy sniffed.

"No man ever made a fool of me," she replied virtuously.

"Well, something did," I retorted.

CHAPTER XIX.

Concerning Thomas.

"Mr. Jamieson," I said, when we found ourselves alone after dinner that night, "the inquest yesterday seemed to me the merest recapitulation of things that were already known. It developed nothing new beyond that story of Dr. Stewart's, and that was volunteered."

"An inquest is only a necessary formality, Miss Innes," he replied. "Unless a crime is committed in the open the inquest does nothing beyond getting evidence from witnesses while events are still in their minds. The police step in later. You and I both know how many important things never transpired. For instance: The dead man had no key, and yet Miss Gertrude testified to a fumbling at the lock, and then the opening of the door. The piece of evidence you mention, Dr. Stewart's story, is one of those things we have to take cautiously; the doctor has a patient who wears black and does not raise her veil. Why, it is the typical mysterious lady! Then the good doctor comes across Arnold Armstrong, who was a graceless scamp—de mortuis—what's the rest of it?—and he is quarreling with a lady in black. Behold, says the doctor, they are one and the same."

Sameness.

"There is a certain sameness about natural scenery," said the man who looks bored.

"Do you mean to compare a magnificent mountain with the broad expanse of the sea?"

"Yes. Wherever you find a spot of exceptional beauty somebody is sure to decorate it with sardine tins and biscuit boxes."

Not So Bad.

Nervous Lady—Don't your experiments frighten you terribly, professor? I hear that your assistant met with a horrible death by falling 4,000 feet from a balloon.

Professor—Oh, that report was greatly exaggerated.

Nervous Lady—Exaggerated! How?

Professor—It wasn't much more than 2,500 feet that he fell.—Puck.

OBSTINATE SPREADING ECZEMA QUICKLY CURED

Mrs. Wm. C. Wood, Newark, N. J., writes:

"Resinol Ointment cured an obstinate case of spreading Eczema on my little ten year old boy's leg, after various other salves had signally failed. The trouble had existed for six months, and nothing seemed to do any good until we procured a jar of Resinol, which quickly cured him. It has now become a household remedy with us. We also have Resinol Soap in daily use by the children, and their skin, health and complexion are perfect."

Resinol Ointment can be positively relied on to give instant relief and quickly cure the torturing skin diseases of infancy and childhood. For eczema, nettle rash, chafing, disfiguring pimples and itching eruptions of all kinds, it is a prompt and sure remedy.

Every family should be safe-guarded with Resinol preparations—Resinol Ointment to cure the skin troubles that now and then occur; Resinol Soap to use regularly for the toilet and bath, to keep the skin pure and healthy and preserve the complexion. Resinol Medicated Shaving Stick is also the best and safest to use, because it keeps the face free from eruptions and prevents infection.

These preparations are sold at all drug stores.

We send free on application a valuable little booklet on Care of the Skin and Complexion. Send for it. Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

Different Sort of Hair.

"Deceiver!" she hissed. "I hate you!"

"Hate me!" he gasped. "Why, it was only yesterday you said you loved every hair on my head."

"Yes, but not every hair on your shoulder!" she retorted, as she held up a bit of golden evidence.—Stray Stories.

"My little son, a boy of five, broke out with an itching rash. Three doctors prescribed for him, but he kept getting worse until we could not dress him any more. They finally advised me to try a certain medical college, but its treatment did no good. At the time I was induced to try Cuticura he was so bad that I had to cut his hair off and put the Cuticura Ointment on him on bandages, as it was impossible to touch him with the bare hand. There was not one square inch of skin on his whole body that was not affected. He was one mass of sores. The bandages used to stick to his skin and in removing them it used to take the skin off with them, and the screams from the poor child were heartbreaking. I began to think that he would never get well, but after the second application of Cuticura Ointment I began to see signs of improvement, and with the third and fourth applications the sores commenced to dry up. His skin peeled off twenty times, but it finally yielded to the treatment. Now I can say that he is entirely cured, and a stronger and healthier boy you never saw than he is to-day, twelve years or more since the cure was effected. Robert Wattam, 1148 Forty-eighth St., Chicago, Ill., Oct. 9, 1909."

The Part of It.

"I wonder if that sour Miss Oldgirl ever had any salad days?"

"I am sure she had the vinegar and peppery part of them."

The Silver Question.

When you see silverware scratched and tarnished with black stains and streaks in the interstices of the ornamental patterns, that is dirt, left there by common, cheap rosin soaps. It is better to use a soap that is antiseptic as well as a perfect cleansing agent. "Easy Task Soap," the hard, white laundry soap, will clean your silverware surely and quickly. It will get out the dirt the other soaps have left. Your grocer will sell you two cakes for ten cents, and if it doesn't satisfy you the makers will give back your dime.

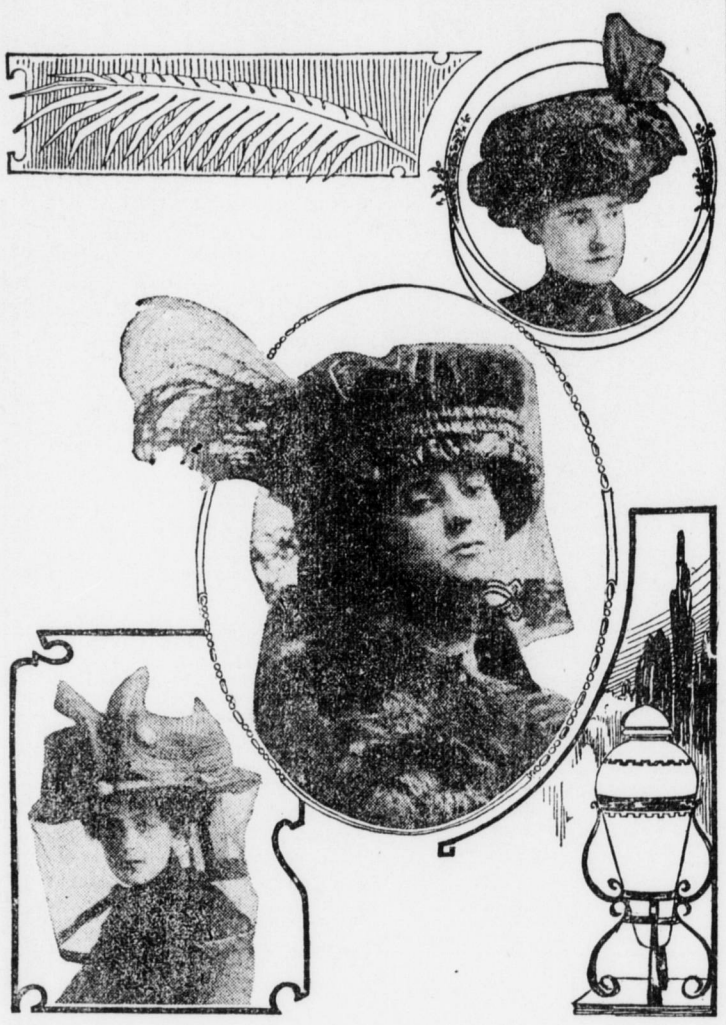
Hats for Mourning



THREE hats of excellent design are shown for those who are wearing mourning. It will be noticed that the shapes are small or moderate in size, that the designs are simple but the workmanship intricate and beautiful. These characteristics are what the wearer should look for when purchasing mourning millinery.

The first hat, a small round turban with rolling brim, is made of tiny folds of crape laid in parallel rows on circles about them or four inches in diameter. These are applied to the crown and brim which have previously been covered with crape laid on plain. The wire frame is covered and lined with silk and the hat is finished with a wired bow of taffeta. A rolled border of crape sometimes binds the edges of such bows and makes a very handsome finish for the ornament.

Fig. 2 shows a moderately large flat brimmed hat in which the underbrim is faced with chiffon and the upper brim and crown are of crape fitted to the shape wings made of folds of chiffon are used for trimming. They are even more effective when made of folds of crape in hats for first mourning. The veil of point de esprit, is bordered with crape and dull jet ornaments hold it to place. Cabochons of the same are sewed to the wings.

No. 3 is a turban made of uncut velvet which is one of the richest materials used in mourning millinery. A soft crown and puffed rim are arranged by shirrings in the material. The role trimming is a full bunch of black fancy feathers in aigrette effect, at the right side. A net veil of fine Brussels is finished with a simple embroidery design in silk. Such veils bordered with a two-inch band of crape, or with three narrow crape folds, are very elegant. Black lynx furs are worn and black suede gloves.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY

NEW SHIRT-WAIST MODEL.

This new model is of tussah silk or drap de soie. It is trimmed in an original way with applique bands of the material and with straps of passementerie.

COMBINING LACE AND BEADING

Slight Carelessness or Lack of Preparation Sufficient to Mar the Result.

When lace and beading are to be sewed to thin materials, such as muslin dresses or underwear of any kind, it must be carefully and thoroughly done to produce good results. Lace edging nearly always has a stout thread in the selvedge which serves admirably as a gathering thread. Pull this thread and stroke the gathers to make them even. Roll the edge of the material and, holding the lace and edge together with the thumb and forefinger of the left hand, with the lace nearest you, overcast the two together with firm even stitches. When sewed to a straight edge insertion can be sewed in exactly the same manner, but to let insertion in, to form a design, first baste the material on the right side to form the desired design, and hem it down on both edges. Cut the material from underneath the insertion, leaving a narrow strip on each side of the insertion. Crease this strip back from the insertion toward the material and turn as for a hem. Overhand this, taking stitches close to the line of the hemming.

FASHION EASY TO FOLLOW

Additions in Dress Accessories That Are Well Within the Reach of All.

There is a late fancy among some Parisian costumers for making the belts of the more elaborate gowns of a color in contrast to the whole color scheme of the garment.

This girdle, though differing in its tone, is of like material, and is merely a new touch—a little oddity—and more evident because of the attention bestowed on the waist line at present.

A dinner gown of sapphire blue, trimmed with crystal embroidery, is given an old rose girdle, and the combination could win its way anywhere, so knowing and artistic was the choice of shades.

Not in years has there been a season when small accessories could add so much to the general style of a costume as do the neck and wrist frills worn with the tailor-made suits of every color, design and material. Such frills may be developed of wide lace, plain or fancy net, chiffon, tulle and even sheer lawn. And the best feature of the fashion is that every woman may, if she wishes, be her own frill maker.

Chiffon, tulle and lawn are undeniably perishable, but then frills of these materials are inexpensive, if homemade, and quite as becoming as those of lace or net.

The art of fine needlework is more in favor now than it has been for many years past, and where children's frocks are concerned remnants of lawn, muslin, lace and embroidery that have been secured at reduced prices during the summer sales can be made up into fascinating little garments at a nominal cost.

To Hold Her Veil Tight.

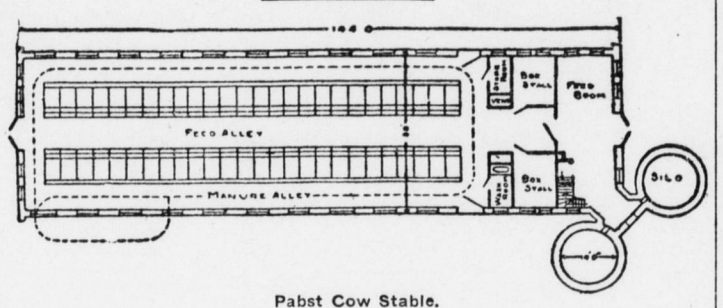
One girl has conceived the idea of running narrow beading around the bottom and threading it with baby ribbon, which she pins at back. Both beading and ribbon are, of course, of the color of the veil, and fasten under the chin, so as to be inconspicuous. She finds this a solution of the veil problem with a low-necked blouse, as her veil never looks either untidy or bulky.

New Combinations.

The latest in color combinations is a dark red and a rather bright blue, so combined as to give the effect of the modish purple. This is very smart indeed, but be careful not to trim with either of these colors; black is the best, or some neutral shade.

COW STABLE COMFORTABLY ACCOMMODATES MANY HEAD

Structure Erected by Fred Pabst at Oconomowoc, Wis., Supplied With Extensive Ventilation System, Etc.



Pabst Cow Stable.

The cow stable erected upon the farm of Fred Pabst at Oconomowoc, Wis., is thirty-eight feed wide and 144 feet long and will comfortably accommodate fifty-four head of cattle exclusive of those which for any reason may be confined in the two large box stalls, says Homestead. The two rows of cows face toward a common feeding alley which is fourteen feet in width and which opens to the out-of-doors at either end of the barn through a large doorway. Back of each row of cows is a ten-foot manure alley which gives ample room for workmen. The barn is supplied with thirty-five windows, which admit abundant light, and an extensive ventilating system which continuously provides fresh air and withdraws the gases and other impurities. A wash room, fully equipped with the necessary appliances, enables the manager to enforce greater cleanliness than would be possible or practicable without this equipment. The feed room and the silos open into the feed alley, and are therefore conveniently situated for the feeder. The barn is modern throughout and is one of the very best models built in recent years in the West.

CAUSES OF HORSE COLIC

Farm Animal Will Thrive, Work Better and Remain Healthier if Given "Hard Feed" During Busy Season.

(By S. C. MILLER.)

When a farm horse is working hard it does not pay to let him eat grass when it is green. He will thrive, work better and remain healthier and more enduring if fed "hard feed" during the busy season. The soft, washy, green grass is palatable of course, but it makes the horse soft and flabby, keeps the bowels too loose, and is apt to induce colic.

If the horse has no work to do he may go on pasture right along and have little grain and when his work is done in late summer he may enjoy the fall pasture made green again by rains. The pasture also is a good place for the brood mare as it promotes flow of milk.

We find that severe attacks of colic often are caused by allowing the hot, tired horse to eat grass at the road side when he has made a long trip to town.

The trouble, too, is prone to come on when horses are suddenly fed new hay or new oats. Both new hay and new oats should be fed in small quantities gradually at first, and along with old hay and oats until the horses become accustomed to the change.

Either the new feed is so palatable that the horse eats too much of it, or it contains some ferment that sets up indigestion and formation of gas.

Water very seldom causes colic. Nature intends horses to have all of it they want, at any and all times and so provided it does no harm. We may cause trouble by withholding drinking water for long periods of time and then forcing the hot, tired horses to drink too much of it at noon and especially just after eating grain.

Allow the work horse adequate supplies of cool, pure water often when he is at work and he never will take too much of it or suffer ill effects from drinking. Indeed the water so given will be likely to prevent sickness and always is appreciated and beneficial.

The Best Rations for Hogs.

Recent experiments at the Missouri station prove that corn, good corn, is a good feed for any animal, and that there is no reason for withholding it from any animal needing food. At the same time, it is shown that corn alone is not nearly so good or so profitable a feed as corn supplemented by some proteid food, such as tankage, linseed oil meal or soy beans.

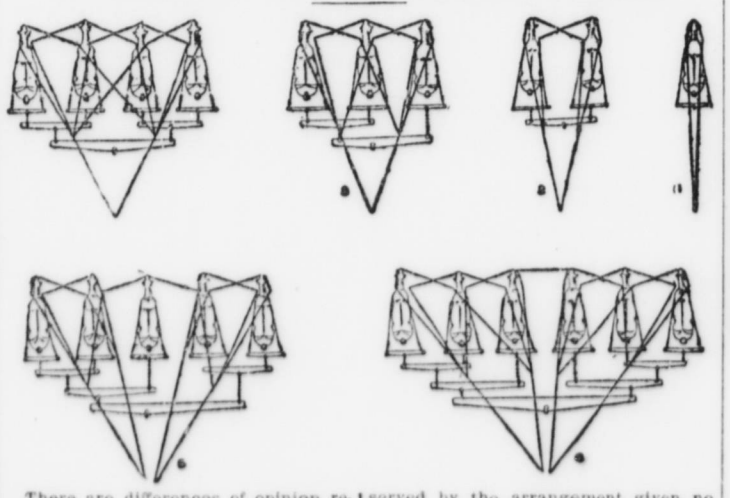
In hogs fed exclusively on corn the animal becomes very fat and chubby, and does not develop properly; the bones are brittle and easily broken. Sixty-five hogs were used in this experiment, and they were divided into lots of five each. Twelve different rations were used, with corn alone in two of them, and corn supplemented with some other feed in the others.

The hogs fed on corn and linseed oil meal and those fed on corn and tankage gained the most; those receiving corn alone were most unsatisfactory.

Clover for Horses.

An experiment conducted at the Illinois experiment station in fattening horses for market showed that clover is worth twice as much as timothy, pound for pound, in putting flesh on the animals. It is the belief of the station that its value will be more highly appreciated as a horse feed when corn forms all or part of the grain ration than where all oats are fed. Clover hay, being rich in protein, renders it especially valuable for feeding young horses.

EVENERS AND SINGLE-TREES



There are differences of opinion regarding the correct arrangement of eveners and single-trees, and in particular the lines or reins. The latter depends much upon the temper of the horse. One farmer drives several horses abreast without the use of lines or whip, having trained them to go, back, and turn by queer sounding calls, writes I. G. Bayley in Popular Mechanics. Another farmer drives six horses abreast with a single pair of lines attached to the outside horses, the inside horses being connected with single straps.

The methods of harnessing up from one to six horses abreast are shown in the sketch, which has been approved by several farmers that have had several years of experience. The methods shown are for plows, scoops or road-scrapers. When connecting to wagons the only difference is in the design of the last evener, which has a hole in the center for connecting to the pole or tongue instead of the chain hook. Single-trees and eveners for wagons are usually made about one-third heavier than for plows, keeping the same lengths throughout. It will be observed by the arrangement given no horse is able to shirk his duty without being detected. In such a case, the evener will turn in favor of the horse working best, thus enabling the driver to spot the guilty one.

Watering the Horse.

As the work a horse does increases, the amount of water he requires increases as with an engine, if not in the same proportion. This is especially true in hot weather. The working horse needs large quantities of water, and needs it often. If it is not supplied it is absorbed from the body tissues; they shrink and the horse is said to get poor. Failure to give sufficient water is far more frequently the cause of farm horses getting poor during the working season than lack of feed. Horses suffer seriously from the usual practise of allowing them to go from one feeding period till the next in hot weather without water. A good rule is to water the first thing in the morning, then within two hours after each feed and the last thing in the evening.

Puzzled by Wireless.

"Mistah Jenkins," asked an old negro of Atlanta of his employer, "would yo' be so good, sah, as to explain to me 'bout this wireless telegraph business I hears 'em a-talking 'bout?"

"Why, certainly, Henry," responded the employer, "though I can do so only in a general way, as I myself know little of the subject. The thing consists in sending messages through the air instead of over wires."

"Yassah," said Henry, "I knows 'bout dat; but, sah, what beats me is how dey fasten the air to the poles!"

USED HYPODERMICS.

Only Relief From Terrible Suffering.

Thomas E. Vest, 1505 S. 12th St., Terre Haute, Ind., says: "I had no control over the urine and the pain when voiding it was so great I often screamed. I grew worse and lay in bed for weeks, the only relief being from hypodermics. I was treated by three physicians without help and the last one said an operation was necessary. At this time I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and passed a gravel stone as large as a pea. The next day I passed two more and from then on improved rapidly until cured."

Even the Children.

Ex-Governor Pennypacker, condemning in his witty way the American divorce evil, told at a Philadelphia luncheon an appropriate story.

"Even our children," he said, "are becoming infected. A Kensington schoolteacher, examining a little girl in grammar, said:

"'What is the future of love?'

"'A divorce,' the child answered promptly."

The Prettiest Girl in Cincinnati.

"My niece," said a well known man the other day, "is often called the prettiest girl in Cincinnati. I believe half the compliments she gets are due to her shirtwaists. They are always as clean and dainty looking as a snowflake. She's mighty particular about them. She won't use the cheap, ordinary rosin soaps for washings, but buys this "Easy Task Soap" you hear so much about. It seems that "Easy Task Soap" just naturally goes after the dirt and doesn't eat into and rot the fabrics like the common yellow rosin soaps. It costs the same—a nickel a cake."

A Generous Gift.

"You may say what you like against young ministers, but I have nothing but praise for our young pastor," the pompous Mr. Brown remarked, as he passed out of the chruch. "Nothing but praise!"

"So I observed," dryly retorted the deacon who passed the plate.—Harper's.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.
